Abstract. While much has been written on Descartes' theory of mind and ideas, no systematic study of his theory of sensory representation and misrepresentation is currently available in the literature. This book is an ambitious attempt to fill this gap. It argues against the established view that Cartesian sensations are mere qualia by defending the view that they are representational; it offers a descriptivist-causal account of their representationality that is critical of, and differs from

It argues that Descartes held a descriptivist account of ideas and explains why, as Arnauld had pointed out, Descartes' view that sensations of secondary qualities are misrepresentations of their objects constitutes a puzzle in light of his theory of ideas and the related notion of objective reality. Since one implication of Descartes' descriptivist theory is that for an idea to be an idea of n it cannot represent n as other than n is, Descartes' theory seems to rule out the very possibility ...

Descartes and the Puzzle of Sensory Representation. Raffaella De Rosa, Descartes and the Puzzle of Sensory Representation, Oxford UP, 2010, 190 pp., $55.00 (hbk), ISBN 9780199570379. The fundamental principle of [the modern, anti-Aristotelian] philosophy is the opinion concerning colours, sounds, tastes, smells, heat and cold; which it asserts to be nothing but impressions in the mind, deriv'd from the operation of external objects, and without any resemblance to the qualities of the objects ...
