With this ultralight atlas you will always have a detailed, reliable, information-rich, battery-independent, shatter-proof map for your adventure.

Tramping: A New Zealand history tells the story of the development of tramping in New Zealand, tracing its origins to the way Maori and early Europeans engaged with the sometimes forbidding New Zealand mountains and bush. It describes how state-sponsored tracks and huts were developed for tourism in the late nineteenth century, most notably on the Milford Track, described as 'the finest walk in the world'. As a growing number of New Zealanders began to explore the outdoors, the first tramping clubs were formed in the early twentieth century, with a subsequent boom in tramping during the 1930s. The growth of an extensive hut and track network in the 1950s and '60s saw New Zealand become one of the best-developed countries in the world for hiking. Trampers' battles to have national parks and wilderness areas established, changes to gear and technology, and the role women have played in tramping are additional themes.

101 Great Tramps of New Zealand contains all of this country's classic tramps, from internationally known tracks such as the Tongariro Crossing, the Abel Tasman Coastal Track and the Milford Track, to popular regional tramps such as Totara Flats in the Tararua Ranges, and the Around the Mountain circuit at Taranaki. New Zealand's many national parks and conservation areas straddle a genuine wilderness back-country, covered with a matrix of tracks and dotted with over 1000 public tramping huts. All of the Department of Conservation's 'Great Walks' are included in this book, as well as some of the fabulously quirky landscapes New Zealand has to offer, such as Great Barrier Island, the Saw-Cut Gorge and the 1000-Acre Plateau. In this fully revised and updated edition of 101 Great Tramps of New Zealand, all the walking times, distances, terrain notes and hit information are up to date. This book is suited to both New Zealanders and overseas visitors across all experience levels and aims to get you out exploring and enjoying the great outdoors of New Zealand.
