We, the Navigators, The Ancient Art of Landfinding in the Pacific is a 1972 book by the British-born New Zealand doctor David Lewis, which explains the principles of Micronesian and Polynesian navigation through his experience of placing his boat under control of several traditional navigators on long ocean voyages.

We, the Navigators - Wikipedia

The expedition's navigator was Mau Piailug of Satawal in Micronesia who, despite being in unfamiliar waters, navigated without instruments and on the basis of his own knowledge. Finney provides his own resume of traditional navigational methods, covering the same areas as those covered by Lewis.
